The Word That Delays The Truce

By Robert S. Elegant

HONG KONG, Dec. 28.-What's in a word? An immeasurable quantity of human suffering and bopes-if it happens to be that single word which sums up the stakes for which men have been fighting in Vietnam for two decades, that single word which is today a major obstacle to a peace settlement.

In Vietnamese the word is "chanh-quyen." A bitter argument rages among Hanol, Washington and Saigon as to exactly how it should be translated into English, and exactly what it means in Victnamese.

When they presented a new peace plan last Oct. 8 Hanoi's negotiators proposed a postwar organization for Sooth Vietnam to be called the Council of National Reconciliation and Concord, The Vietnamese text, which reached Washington after the English version, described the council as "co-cao chanh-cuyen." Hanoi's English text translated that term as "administrative insisted that the Saigon government be displaced by a new structure of political power as a condition of peace. Instead, the council, an "administrative structure," was to be responsible for organizing free, internationally supervised elections through which the South Vietnamese people would decide their own future. The council was, Mr. Kissinger understood, definitely not a government, since Saigon and the Viet Cong would continue to rule areas already under their respective control. But both the Saigon government and American linguists were deeply troubled after studying the Vietnamese text. The term co-cao chanh-quyen, they pointed out, could perhaps be stretched to mean an "administrative structure," but its basic and literal meaning was "structure of political power."

The difference was obviously immense. The South Vietnamese protested that Hanoi's apparent concession was really no concession at all. Saigon argued that Hanol was by no means conceding its fundamental demand that a new government must take the place of the present Salgon regime as a condition of peace.

The ramifications of the debate are extensive. For example, Saigon asked, would the Council of National Reconciliation and Concord establish sub-branches throughout the country just like a covernment? Exactly how would it "encourage and supervise" free c.ec ions?

Saigon Cootention

Regardless of those questions, Saigon stubbornly insisted, the controversial word was itself an insuperable obstacle. Saigon said it would under no circumstances sign an agreement which created a new "structure of political power" in South Vietnam. Saigon regime still contends that its signature would give away the fundamental principle that the South Vietnamese have maintained and that the United States he endorsed—the people's right to choose their own government. A peace agreement containing the term co-cao chanh-quyen would not only formally establish super-government over the South but would open endless possibilities for Communist maaupulation. Salgon complained.

That remains Saigon's position. though the government has been criticized for sacrificing lives to semantic quibbling.

Killing of London Robber Revives Controversy on Arming Policemen LONDON, Dec. 28 (Reuters).—A 27-year-old policeman

lying wounded in a hospital bed was today the center of a controversy over whether British policemen should be armed for normal duty.

The question has been frequently aired in public, in police circles and in Parliament, as well-armed eriminals use more desperate methods. Today, the controversy surfaced again after Constable Peter Slimon shot dead one bandit and wounded another in a shootout with a gang of bank robbers shortly before midday yesterday. He himself was shot twice. In Britain, the arming of policemen is an emotive issue and almost all the immediate reaction was firmly on the side of maintaining the strict laws in force for issuing weapons to the police.

Constable Slimon was armed with a Webley revolver only because he was on apecial duty outside an embassy, one of ecveral under tight security because of the threat of terrorist attack. He only passed the bank during the raid by chance. In Britain, a policeman can use a gun "only if absolutely necessary" and guns are issued only for special occasions such as guarding royalty, visiting dignitaries and in hunting down dangerous criminals.

Several opposition Labor members of Parliament plan to question the home secretary (interior minister) on how many policemen are armed when Parliament resumes later this month Police spokesmen argue that arming the police will not reduce violent crime and only lead to more killing of policemen in a country where only four membere of the force have been shot dead since 1970.

Dramatizing the dilemma facing policemen and legislators is the fact that yesterday's shooting was the first in British police records in which a policeman killed a gumman during a bank raid. Under police procedure, on inquiry into the shooting will be held with a copy going to the home secretary.

If the embassy enforces that regulation, it will be the first time in memory that the U.S. government has treated Mr. Hughes as an ordinary citizen. He has been living for months in Managua, the capital of Nicaragua, apparently without any question being raised about his passport.

He flew in and out of tha United States after the earthquake last weekend drove him from Managua, and apparently no objection was made to his not having a passport. And tha embassy sought to expedite his admission to B itsin hy telling the Home Office that he was coming without a valid passport. British immigration rules allow the admission of foreigners without passports so long as they carry documents establishing their identity and nationality. Some Labor members of Parlia-ment were reported planning to protest the Home Office's handling of the case.

Attempts to track down Mr. Hughes today proved futile. Oroups of reporters clustered in the hotel's lobby and photographers took pictures of the ninth floor from the ground and from windows of other hotels nearby. Curtained Rolls-Royces

Four curtained Rolls - Royces brought Mr. Hughes and his party to his hotel from the airport yes-torday. Mr. Hughes moved into the west wing on the top floor, at $2,500 a day.

The wing was sealed off, and an intercom system was installed at the main door. Police with walkie-talkies patrolled the streets below, and guards manned all doors to the wing.

A cleaning woman vacuuming the corridor was escorted everywhere by two guards. An English voice challenged all visitors over tile intercom, and said: "I'm from Rothschilds, Go eway."

Arrangements for Mr. Hugbes's visit apparently were made by N. M. Rothschild & Sons, the London bankers. The chairman of the bank, Edmund de Rotbschild, refused to comment on Mr. Hughes's arrival.

Top Laborite Fate of Vietnam Can Turn On the Definition of a Word

(Continued from Page I) that it is the reality, not the description that counts-and Hanol was recognizing Saigon's sovereignty over most of the South. But Vietnamese specialists in international law feel that the word can become the reality. They recommend close study of the term co-cao chanh-quyen. Such examination also offers a fascinating example of the way words can determine the fate of men and nations.

Co-cao, all agree, means simply "structure." There is no argument about that noun which, according to Vietnamese syntax, precedes the adjective that modi-

Chanh-quyen is another matter. It can mean either "administrative" or an "administration" but only in the political sense. Hanhchanh, quite another word, moans "administrative" or "administrallon" in general. Hanh-chanh can describe the administration of either a country or a private enterprise.

But chanh-quyen can only refer to the administration of a country. It is exactly equivalent to the Americao word "administration" used to describe government by a specific group. Hanol chanhquyen, for example, means the Hanoi administration" or lite Hanoi regime."

Dictionary Definition --A standard Vietnamesé-English dictionary defines the disputed chanh-quyen as:

"Regime: political power." Administration is not mentioned. However, the term comes originally from Chinese. It can, therebe und ence to Chinese authorities, just as the Latin root ofte 'illuminates the precise meaning of an English word.

In Chinese, chanh-quyen (pronounced cheng-chuan) can only mean "political power." It can mean an administration in the sense of a regime, but not the adjective administrative.

Take the definitions of two standard Chinese-English dictioneries. Matthews, published in 1856, says flatly: "Political power," Lin Yu-tang'a dictionary, published in 1972, says: "Political power: political rights of the people."

Two Chinese Communist publications are illustrative. "Chinese-English Practical Dic-tionary," published in Peking in defines chanh-quyen "political power: government: the reigns [sic] of power: state power: regime." The "Chinese-Language Dictionary." published In Shanghai in 1956, defines chanh-quyen in terms which trans-late as: "Controlling the appara-

100,000 'Phantom' Soldiers Were on Cambodia Payroll

PHNOM PENH, Dec. 28 (NYT). —The Cambodian government has acknowledged that because of corruption by military commanders and other "irregula-rities," it has "at times" paid salaries to as many as 100,000 nonexistent soldiers. The government said that it had sometimes mot payrolls of 300,000 soldiers even though it has now found that the actual number of mcn in the army is about 200,000. These "phantom" troops—a creation of falsa payrolls submitted by unit commanders are the most widespread form of corruption in Cambodia and have become the focus of bitter popular complaint.

A private in the Camhodian Army receives about $20 a menth, So 100,000 "phantom" privates would put $2 million a month into the pockets of unscrupulous commanders. Virtually all of this money comes through Unli-ed States aid, which will total about $300 million this year. The information about Cam-

The government of President Lon Nol is reportedly under heavy pressure from the United States, its principal benefactor, to crack down on the military corruption and improva the performance of the Cambodian armed forces. # U.S. Churches Open Drive to Renew Faith

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 (AP),-American Christians of nearly all churches have started their most hroadly cooperative venture in modern times—to try to strengthen the commitment of this generation to Christ.

The yearloog, interdenominational effort began on Christmas Day with the first of a two-week period of noontime prayers for its success. It involves Roman Catholics and almost all Protestants.

Called "Key-73," its theme is: "Calling Our Continent to Christ" Taking part are fundamentalists, conservatives, liberals, moderates and small and large denominations that previously have shunned ecumenical activities, such as the big Southern Baptist Convention and Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

"It is the widest joint effort in the history of North American Christianity," said the Rev. Joe Hale of Nashville, Tenn., United Methodist director of ecumenical evangelism and a member of the "Key-73" Executive Committee.

"It has groups working together that have never worked together before. It may do more to build a united Christian front than anything we've ever done.

A central factor behind such inclusive participation is that each denomination and organization may take part in ways and to the extent it chooses, so as not to compromise its position or practice.

Reflecting the diversity of participants, the activities also will vary widely, from new-style to old-feshioned evangelistic techniques, including:

Television and broadcast speclais, continent-wide scripture dis-tribution and study groups, youth celebrations, exhibits at state fairs, newspaper ads, touring companies of Christian artists and actors, hymn contests, house-tohouse visits and preaching

Disaster Loans To U.S. Farmers Get Budget Ax WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP).

-The Nixon administration has shut off emergency disaster loans to farmers in another move to hold federal spending to the $250 billion ceiling the President has imposed.

The Farmers Home Administration was ordered yesterday to halt the flow of loans to farmers in counties designated as disaster arcas as a result of severe weather damage to crops, livestock and other property.

The Agriculture Department said that FHA field offices were instructed to stop accepting applications for aid in counties where the loans had been available for 60 days or more and in other countles when the twomonth deadline expires.

George C. Knappl, an FHA assistant administrator, told a reporter he had no idea how much money the government might save by the order.

Emargency FHA loans since July 1 totaled $79 million and involved 15,855 borrowers as of Nov. 30. A total of $146 million in emergency assistance had been projected for the fiscal year ending. ing June 30.

The administration's action provoked a sharp response from the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, which accused the government of turning its back on farmers in the hour of their greatest need."

"Farmers are not asking for a handout. All we request are loans to cover bonified losses, which are totally beyond the control of the farmer." federation president Leonard Schneli said.

Onio's farm crop loss is estimated at $250 million, with some areas still reporting that 50 percent of the soy bean crop is still in the fields because of wet weather.

Wallace Is Using Anti-Pain Device

MIAMI, Dec. 28 (AP).-Veterans Administration doctors yesterday fitted Gov. George Wallace of Alabama with an experimental device designed to block pain impulses to his brain.

The device, called a cutaneous stimulator, operates on flashlight batteries and sends a tingling electric shock through the ner-yous system. Gov. Wallace said that it "is supposed to fool my spinal cord."

Gov. Wallace, who is relaxing in Miami this week, said that he called the Veterans Administration yesterday morning after experiencing some discomfort from the injury to his spinal cord received in an assassination attempt earlier this year.

Gov. Wallace said doctors at the VA hospital invited him to try out the stimulator. The device connects to the skin by electrode strips and Gov. Wallace can regulate the electrical impulses by manipulating dials on a cratrol box on his wheel chair.

Truman Drew Up Guidelines for Last Rites.

By James T. Wooten INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Dec. 28 (NYT).-Several years ago. at the delicate urgings of his family and closest friends, an aging Harry S Truman began to give gome serious thought to his last rites and precisely how he would prefer that they be conducted.

His ideas, most of which were couched in the form of broadly stated guidelines for a relatively simple service, were forwarded to Fifth Army headquarters at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, where they hecame the basis for months of planning that ultimately produced a program for a five-day state funeral,

"It looks like a dam. fine show," the former President reportedly chuckled after he had read page after page of the Army's detailed maps, charts, graphs and orders for logistical and supportive services. "I just hate that I'm not going to be around to see it."

he gave it his final approval, and the planning of Operation Missouri Plan, the military label for the project, was completed except for some revisions.

That was more than three years ago and although some of the original plans have now been discarded at the request of Mr. Truman's widow, OPMOPLAN. as the Army eventually came to call it, has been officially in effect since the moment his death was formally announced Tueaday morning in nearby Kansas City.

The work of several hundred persons over several hundred days and several thousand man-hours. the Army's blueprint for Mr. Truman's funeral is an example of the intricate preparation for the last rites of every President since before Franklin D. Conversations with several officers and enlisted men who participated in the development of the plans for Mr. Truman's funeral revealed that, at one point in the developmental stage, several officers seriously suggested that should Mrs. Truman object to some of the plans for the funeral, the Army would disregard her wishes, follow the original plans and explain that she had been distraught because of her. husband's death.

By Robert H. Williams WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Outgoing Secretary of Defense Meivin R. Laird announced yester-day that the Navy will continue to use portions of the bomb-battered sland of Culebra for target practice despite promises he reaffirmed just before elec-tion day last month

In a statement viewed as outrageous in Culchus and in Puerto Rico, its parent island-15 miles to the west, Mr. Laird announced that the Navys use of the tiny, inhabited island as a training target will not change before 1985. The Navy has been bombine

The Navy has been bombing shelling, strating and shooting rockets at Culebus since 1936, operating 6 1/2 hours a day six days a week and three hours on Sunday as recently as 1970, using live ammunition—and occasionally bobbing an off-target missile through the man town of Dewey, where most of the labelland's 800-odd, inhabitants live land's 800-odd inhabitants live in a state of fear and anxiety. A treaty of sorts was reached on april 1, 1971, when Mr. Laird, after a $100,000 study had been conducted, announced that live ammunition would no longer be used and that the beaches would be opened for the use of the populace (except during shipfiring time). He said that reis tions between the Navy and the citizenry had improved and, most important, said that studies were being mitiated to find someplace to blast besides Culebra, by 975 In yesterday's statement, re-

Further Delay On Lead-Free Gasoline in U.S.

WASHINGTON Dec. 28 (WP) —William D. Ruckelshaus, nead of the Environmental Protection Agency, yesterday ordered most of the nation's gas stations to make lead-free fuel available to motorists by mid-1974.

House pressure to go slow, Mr. Ruckelshaus replied: If you mean has Peter Flanigan called me, no he has not "Mr. Flanigan is a White House liaison man with big business.

Meanwhile, environmenatalist

Speak Up, Mr. President

Despite the communiqué tardily issued in Saigon Wednesday, the Nixon administration continues to evade the toughest and most pertinent questions about the massive new United States air assault against North

The communique confirms the ferocity of the attacks—more than 1,400 strikes by giant B-52s and other bombers in a week against "military" targets in the heavily populated Hanoi-Haiphong area. But even in this initial limited lifting of the secrecy veil the old White House-imposed policy of evasion and dissembling persists.

The statement details damage to military installations but says nothing of widely reported damage to such places as the Gfa Lam international airport, the Bach Mai hospital, half a dozen foreign embassies in Hanol, foreign ships in the harbor at Halphong, etc. Does anybody imagine that reconnaissance has revealed no such damage?

The command spokesman refused comment on questions concerning civilian casualties. Can anyone believe that carpetbombing of this magnitude does not take a terrible civilian toll in such a densely peopled region?

The effects of these raids are no secret to the people auffering their terrifying impact. The facts will oot_from Hanoi authorities, from foreign diplomats and newsmen stationed in North Vietnam, from Americans visiting there. But the American people are entitled to a prompt and full accounting from the men responsible for these acts committed in their name.

Most disturbing of all is the persisting silence of the Commander-in-Chief on why this renewed bombardment was ordered and how it is supposed to advance peace. Constitutional as well as moral issues are raised by President Nixon's failure to consult with Congress or confide in the American people about a major escalation of the war that has the gravest national and international implications. The President has yet even to define the issues at the stalled Paris peace talks which are the presumed justification for this retreat into barbarism. As Pope Paul VI has observed with extreme understatement, the reasons for the negotiating breakdown are not "sufficiently apparent."

Harry Truman, whom the nation now mourns, used to emphasize that "the buck stops here"-at the desk of the President of the United States. It is past time that Mr. Nixon exercised his responsibility to speak up and explain the actions for which 200 million Americans must share respon-

Prague's Careful New'West Policy'

No single event defines so exactly and cruelly the onset of the cold war as Stalin's decision of 1947 to bar Czechoslovakia from accepting Washington's historic postwar offer to help reconstruct Europe. Prague was cautiously eager to participate. But, Stalin told Masaryk, "The credits which are involved in the Marshall Flan are very uncertain and it became established that through the bondage of these credits, the great powers were seeking to form a Western bloc and to isolate the Soviet Union." That was that What followed the Communist coup in 1948, the Soviet intervention in 1968 -composed one of the most tragic chapters of recent history.

This flashback seems appropriate to recall at a moment when Prague, though still in a posture of cautious eagerness, again seeks to share in the possible benefits of broader economic collaboration with the West. This is the plain meaning of the Czech premier's statement to Washington Post correspondent John Goshko (IHT, Dec. 16-17) that his country wishes to settle the few financially trivial but politically troublesome issues outstanding between Prague and Washington, and then get on with the real business of trade, technology and credits. Mr. Strougal'a statement, made in the first interview given by a ranking Czech to a Western newsman since the Soviet intervention, was preceded by a good deal of quiet State Department bring mutual benefits, though perhaps not spadework. If all goes well, it should in large ones. In the longer term, the best time bring Czechoslovakia ont of the coid which it has been in since 1968.

This can only happen, of course, within the guidelines laid down for Czeth policy by the Kremlin. If Prague is now in a posttion to seek the openings to the United States which most other East Europeaoa have already made, then it is because the Soviet Union by its own steps toward detente with Washington has set an example which it cannot easily or with good reason deny to its allies, Prague's move also suggests that the post-1968 Czech leadership has achieved the degree of "normalization"—that is, local stability, goaranteed by a discreet continuing Soviet occupation-which alone in Moscow's eyes entitles Prague to deal more widely with the West, meaning with West Germany as well as the United States. That such dealing should make the Czech government more fit to cope with the fastchanging world economic scene, and more popular with its own citizens, cannot have been lost on anyone. Needless to say, any political backsliding, in the direction of police arbitrariness, can only injure Prague's careful new "West policy."

Americans will surely keep in mind that their own natural sympathy for Czechoslovakia must be tempered by a realization that each time since the war that this culturally Western country has tried to movetoo fast or far for Moscow's taste, it has suffered accordingly. No Western condemnation of the "Brezhnev Doctrine" rationalizing Soviet intervention in East Europe can spare Prague, and other Eastern capitals, its reality. In the short run, improvements in ties between Washington and Prague can prospects for increased Czech independence surely lie in the habits and institutions of broader East-West cooperation which are only now, after a generation of genuine tragedy, being built.

seeming, an ordinary man who brought wisdom and strength to the uses of power, Lester Pearson was an extraordinary man who exercised authority without power. The passing of both within a few days of one another closes a chapter which today's leaders can read with profit, and whose influence is still strong upon the world.

Amid the wreckage of World War II, the United States had to act; Canada, through Leater Pearson, and the parliaments and people who supported him, chose to act. It was a worthy exercise of world citizenship. Canada was not a Sweden or a Switzerland. whom the accidents of history had left unscathed by war. It had borne its part in the destruction of that naked militarism which threatened to overwhelm the world, and it did more than its share—with Pearson as a kind of super-functionary in the processtoward binding up the wounds, toward easing the dangerous tensions of the post-war years.

Pearson, like France's Couve de Murville, was not happy in the parochialism of domestic politics, although he served conscientiously and effectively as a minority prime minister of Canada. His favorite stage was the United Nations, and he did more than nearly any other single figure to make globe.

If Harry S Truman was, to all outward that unwieldy body useful in the cause of peace. Quite possibly, if he had not been refused (by the Soviet Union) the opportunity of serving as secretary-general, the later history of the UN might contain more vital force, iess idle chatter.

> Possibly, too, if he had not been caught up in the internal problems of his country. and if Canada itself had not been forced inwards by such pressing problems as the French question, the adaptation of the great powers to more or less peaceful coexistence would have been speedier. For Canada, and Lester Pearson, held a unique position in the Commonwealth and in relationship to the United States-one that enabled moral auasion to be brought to bear when the big battalions could only wave swords at one

> Pearson bore his anthority, his many honors and his difficulties with grace and humor. It was by no means an accident that this gentleman of culture and moch practical knowledge was widely known as "Mike." The nickname did not derogate from his stature; the Nobel Peace Prize could not really add to it. He was proud to be a Canadian, but his concerns ran farther than from "sea unto sea," as his country's motto has it; his infloence, and Canada's, extended around the

Outrage to Conscience of Americans

By Edward M. Kennedy

WASHINGTON-In recent weeks President Nixon has had another opportunity to end the Indochina tragedy and accomplish the return of our prisoners of war—on a basis which would have had the support and praise of all Americans. But events suggest a return to the same old war. For we cannot read about the heavy bombing, the new targets and the un-precedented loss of American pilots and planes, without a deep and despairing sense that peace is not at hand,

And as we gather with our families during these special days of peace on earth and goodwill toward men, how can we help but think about this war? How can any American be proud of the face that our country is presenting to the world during this holiday month of 1972?

The President promised peace, He made a decision that nothing Vietnam and Indochina was worth the dying of another American soldier. But we are still killing others for comething that we are no longer willing to die for in Vietnam. And this should outrage the conscience of all

There can be no mistake about the impact recent developments are having on the people of Indochina. As the violence continues from both sides and the bombing escalates to new highs, the crisis of Indochina's people grows and grows. Tragedy is piled upon tragedy. More children become orphans. More thousands of men and women and children become refugees, and thousands more are injured or maimed or killed. They war victims-nearly 15 millionall for a few clauses in an agreement being debated half-way around the world.

Our Responsibility

I yield to no one in condemning the hrutality of the other side. Bot this violence cannot relieve our side's responsibility to minimize the impact of battle on civilians. The American people expect this of their government.

Since 1965, however, our country has dropped nearly 7.5 million tons of bombs over Indochina, the bulk of it during the last four years. This is more than 11 times the tomage dropped during the Korean war, and more than three times the tonnage dropped during all of World War II. At least one million tons of bombs have been dropped since January of this year. And for anyone to imply-as our military planners so often do-that these bombs have little impact on civilians, on the creation of war victims, defies common sense and an eight-year record in the hearings of the subcommittee on refugees.

The people problems of Indochins have been bad enough for many years. But in 1972, the of both Vietnams alone those of Laos and Cambodis-have taken the most feroclous beating of the war. The number of war victims continues to mount in Laos and Cambodia. In North Vietnam, where our guns and bombs are the only source of destruction and death, tens of thousands of civilians have suffered immeasurably. And nowhere has the heavy pace of the war been more evident than in South Vietnam, where enough data is currently available to measure the war's tragic impact on civilians. There wera more war victims in South Vietnam this year than in any previous year of the war. In 1972, some two million people in South Vietnam became refugees; civilian war casualties totaled at least 200,000-incloding some 65,000 deaths. Based on the official count of hospital admissions alone, up to one-fourth of the casualties were children 12 years old and under, and over one-half were women and

The human suffering in Indo-

It is difficult to comprehend the aggregate statistics of war victims. It is even more difficult to comprehend the implications of these statistics—and the comtinuing war—on the family struc-ture, traditions and social fabric of nations confronted with massive upheaval and total war. Millions holed up in a nightmare of death and destruction are crying out for peace and relief. And we must answer their cries for help.

Longer Than Patience The war in Indochina has been with us longer than understanding and patience can bear. The people of this country are not only tired of this war-they are tired of hearing the stale arguments for it and against it. They are tired of seeing our men withdrawn from Vietnam, only to have others show up across the border in Thailand-or on the decks of our gunboats at sea--or in the cockpits of our bombers in the air. They are tired of baving their hopes for peace met they are tired of seeing pictures of refugees and casualties and orphans and maimed children flash across their televisioo screens and the pages of their newspapers.

The American people want peace. They want the return of our captured pilots and an ac-counting of the missing-in-action. And they ask today more than ever before—how many more pilots and planes will go down? And bow much longer will we he prisoners of this war?

Today we pray that the peace that was at hand can be retrieved with the early renewal of negotiations in Paris. The sup-port of the Congress and our citizens in pursuing this objective is there for the President's ask-ing. But if the war goes on, if the stalemate in negotiations contimes, then the Congress must and will act on the people's mandate for peace, analytical braio, a brilliant reputation as a Harvard professor and considerable political experience. He worked for a while with President Kennedy but quit because he disagreed over De Gaulle. Then he became Nelson cracles rather than presidential Rockefeller's foreign policy pert. Rockefeller recommended nim to Nixon.

Kissinger arrived at the White House at an appropriate moment. Washington, which had experimented with presidential agents before, was even more ready for the formula because the bureancracy had become so swollen. Klasinger soon realized that one of his functions would be to drive this bureaucracy, above all the State Department, against its inclinations.

He saw that all around the world foreign policy was in the process of moving from foreign ministries to the office of the chief of government. What was occurring in the United States was part of a global process. Kissinger originally regarded his primary function as that of eliciting options from various covernment experts and presentjoh grew as these options dealt with increasingly important matters and Kissinger became a rov-

Friction Produced

The growth of his influence inevitably produced friction with the State Department. He had no desire to quarrel with Secre-

DARIS.—Henry, the proto-Kis- Nizon, whereas Kissinger was a of Bengal as a token warning that singer, came to his job with an German-Jewish immigrant with a foreign accent who had previrivals.

But conflict was inescapable. Cabinet secretaries tend to be spokesmen for their own bureausnokesmen to their bureaucracies Nor did the State Department like Kissinger dominating policy questions.

Kissinger contended be didn't formulate policy but only forced the President to come up with alternatives on a day-to-day basis as problems arose. Nixon had his own coherent philosophy on foreign affairs and didn't intend to be anyone's rubber stamp.

The White House developed a new kind of bluenring for longterm policy. This was featured in 1972 by the presidential trips to Peking, which was regarded hy Nixon as a hifurcation in the road, and to Moscow, which was regarded as a historical landmark. The Chinese option was held as essential to America's Soviet policy.

This conception heavily influenced the U.S. attitude during the India-Pakistan war. China supported Pakistan and felt that the United States reacted against Soviet-backed India (as it did ineffectually). Peking could expect American reaction should Washington also reckned Moscow would get wrong ideas if it felt the United States was too weak to react at all for its ally, Pakistan. So the nuclear carrier

India shouldn't attack Pakistan, It was also believed ously been linked to Nixon's this would discourage Sadat from carrying out his promise to start another round of Palestine war. These calculations were part of a global concept of American policy. They did not seek Indian enmity por did they reckon on sudden Chinese fidelity. Washington continued to regard Japan as its permanent ally in the Pacific and saw China continuing as an opponent

Kind of Climax

These decisions, when taken together, may be regarded as a kind of climax in the presidential method of policy-making and cannot yet be assessed. Notwithstanding, in many ways the Kissinger approach has proven its value—ultimately depending on whether it can wind down the Victnam war.

It was the judgment of the Kissinger office-more than a year before the event-that Moscow would pull its immense military establishment out of Egypt. It was the Kissinger office that cooled a potential crisis with Moscow about a submarine base in Cienfuegos, Cuba, It now seeks to jar policy-makers into reckoning what may happen to Yugoslavia when Tito dies.

Kissinger has become an international figure. The Assembly of Western European Union re-cently discussed "the very parti-cular manner in which U.S. foreign policy is conducted by Dr. Henry Kissinger," adding: "On more than one occasion there has been evidence that Dr. Kissinger's own conduct of foreign affairs has been independent of the State Department, which may not always have been kept informed." The point is there is nothing unconstitutional about it. That is simply the way Nixon, who is charged with making policy, wants to work. Executive diplomacy is practiced increasingly in other countries. The grumbling heard in Foggy Bottom is by no means unfamiliar in other 20th century capitals.

The Cabinet By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak WASHINGTON -- Obscured by his wholesale bureaucratic purge. President Nixon has quietly buried haif his cubinet and fashlored a radical new instrument for running the domestic side of the government: a small supercabinet, interiwined with the White House siaff and embodying Nixon reorganization schemes spurned by Congress

This structure has not been announced and may never be for-maily unveiled: In overall command will be White House demostic policy chief John Ehrlichman and Sceretary of the Treasury George Shultz, wearing a new second hat as presidential assistant. Its members, dividing domestic policy areas, are: Shultz for economics; Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) Caspar Weinberger for human resources; Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz for natural resources: Secretary of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) James Lynn for community development.

It is no coincidence that these policy areas are identical to new cabinet departments proposed by Mr. Nixon in 1971 and turned down flat hy Congress. Nor is it coincidence that old departments abolished by the 1971 reorganization plan-Interior, Labor, Commerce. Transportation, for example-are now given eccond-class status. Thus, working in stealth while Congress recessed, Mr. Nixon has rebuilt the government to make sure domestic policy and operations will now be tightly controlled from the White House, That control derives partly from obligeration of distinctions between White House staff and cabinet. While Ehrlichman's buge domestic policy staff at the White House is now disbanded, his top aldes are scattered among cabinet decartments. Likewise, assistant and under secretaries are now picked by the White House, a precedent-breaking step. Still uncertain is whether Butz, Weinberger and Lynn will join Shultz as White House staffers.

More important than this commingling are the four supercabinet members themselves; all are intelligent, tough and energetic. None has ever held elective office or sought publicity. Above all, they will cause Mr. Nixoo no trouble. none has his own constituency to interfere with the President's grand design of scaling down the federal government.

Case in Point

A case to point is Lynn, the new secretary of HUD. His predecessor, former Gov. George Romney of Michigan, antagonized the White House by pushing racklly integrated housing and promoting more money for the cities. Lynn, a Cleveland lawyer without political experience, has no such divided loyalties. As under secretary of commerce, he impressed the White House with his dependability and low profile,

But, critics say. Lynn knows nothing about urban needs. "That's ! all right," a top presidential adviser explained to us. "Jim Lynn is in there to stop programs, not

A similar role is envisioned for Weinberger at HEW. White sant policy disagreements from liberal Republican Elliot Richardsoo at HEW, believe Welcherger wili close down programs without

That leaves the rest of the regular cabinet with huge offices and long black limousines but no

The old-line departments are retained only because Congress insists. Congressional Interior Committees would rather dear with Interior Secretary Rogers Morton than natural resources czar Butz. But as the real source of power hecomes apparent, Nixon aides reason, a practical Congress will turn there. So, the old-line departments could atrophy long before they are formall, abol-

The major contradiction here is the new secretary of Isbor, hard-hat union chief Peter Brennan. Although the Labor Department is earmarked for oblivion, Brennan is not.

Scali at the UN I would like to enter a dissent to the New York Times editorial (IHT, Dec. 22) criticizing the ap-pointment of John Scall as United States Ambassador to the United Nations. I have known John Scali for a number of years. He is a gifted and articulate student of American foreign policy. I think he will do an effective job at the United Nations. I do not remember the criticism of mexperience being levelled by the Times on the appointment of George Bush, a run-of-the-mill wo-term congressman from Texas by way of the Eastern establishment schools. But John Scall has forgotten more about foreign policy than George Bush would have learned if he had stayed 20 years at the UN.

I am sure that with the replacement of Mr. Bush, who has slavishly followed administration policy, we are seeing the installation of a UN ambassador who will have the courage to lift his voice in the councils of government when he sees American foreign policy going astray—as it is tragically doing today in Vict-PIERRE SALINGER.

Right of Reply

Mr. Nixon has spoken and Mr. has spoken, and now the B-52s are speaking. But is that to be the last word? The United States is still at least nominally a democracy and the right of reply has not yet been eliminated. The technicians, then, have taken over in the Pentagon and in the White House. Nice going, Kissinger. Nixon is, after all, Nixon, and we all knew more or less what to expect of him. But Kissinger has surprised some of us. Operating as a technician, he has maneuvered himself, withthe space of only a few months, into a moral position not unlike that of another technician, his late former compatriot Adoli E Kissinger finds this comparison harsh, his recourse is clear. He can prove that it is unwarranted by dissociating him-self publicly from the current Vietnam policy of his employer. I am not a technician, but it seems to me that in falling to do so he is announcing his implicit approval of that policy.

PARIS, Dec. 28 (IRT) Israeli Fremier Golda Meir's visit here next month has set off a debate in official circles over whether she should be received officially.

Mrs. Meir, whe will be here Jan. 13 and 14 for a meeting of the Socialist International, would not ordinarily be expected to meet French officials, given the deteriorated state of Franco-Is-raeli relations dating back to the six-day war in 1967.

But according to raliable sources, some French officials are now thinking that with national elections coming up in March, some sort of official contacts might be a good idea.

Mrs. Meir is just one of several Socialist leaders who will be here, but because of the cool state of Franco-Israeli relations she represents the biggest problem for the French government.

Contacts Denied

Official French sources deny for the moment that any contacts are planned. They say that Mrs. Melr's visit will he entirely private and compare it to a visit a states-man might make to the United Nations without having any official contacts with U.S. officials in Washington.

But the sources make it clear they think that a Socialist Inter-national meeting in Paris coming less than two months before elec-tions is a political operation, de-

After resigning from the office of prime minister in April, 1968, Mr. Pearson left public life to which he devoted 40 years. He soon jeined the faculty of Carleton University in Ottawa and later accepted an appointment as chancellor of the university.

Rush to Copenhagen Typically, he had to rush from the university investiture cere-mony to catch a flight to Copenbagen for a meeting of the World Bank Commission on Interna-tional Aid and Development. As commission chairman, Mr. Pear-son, newly "retired," traveled 75,000 miles, called on 76 leaders of governments and supervised a report urging the "have" nations to increase financial and technical assistance to the "have-net,"

The climax to his diplomatic career came in 1956 after Israel, with the support of Britain and France, attacked Egypt and tha Suez Canal. The action split the Western alliance, brought on a crisis in the Commonwealth and posed the threat of a new world war. She was not trying to sell cancer cures, though. regeneration movements go, Seksi Mahikari Bunmei Kyodan (the Church of the World True-Light Civilization) is a very low-pressure operation. Even if you have the address of its first European outpost-53 Rue Condorcet, Paris 9-it isn't easy to find. There was no clue in the building's courtyard, and no concierge was visible. On the second try, however, a neighbor pointed out the place: first staircase on the left, one flight up.

Session in Progress

In an antercom upstairs a neat row of shoes and sandals, and the sound of chanting, indicated that a True-Light session was in progress. The pink-kimono lady, Miss Sato, left after greeting her visitor and returned with a short, handsome, wiry man in a black kimono. This was the instructor, Mr. Oboutchi. He lcoked like a man who could flip you over his shoulder if the need ever arose, but who would, on the whole, prefer not to. Together, in an adjoining room, they made a brave effort to surmount the linguistic barrier and explain the principles of their faith.

The Sekai Mahikari group has been in Paris for less than a ear. Its origins in Japan are about 13 years old. The church's founder, the Rev. Koutama Okada, who is now 72, was described by Miss Sato as a man "who was very rich—an important businessman—but who lost everything in the war." And then "he heard tha voice of God." The voice told him, according to Miss Sato, that he had been entrusted with the mission of starting a new world religion to combine the worthwhile elements "of the five existing great religions."

This was necessary, his disciple went on, because the human body had become "polluted—had lost the power of purifying itself."

It will be apparent by now that we are treading the marshy ground of "faith-healing," but the essence of the True-Light movement seems, on first acquaintance, to be both simpler and more complex than that. Miss Sato and her colleague, as they attempted to explain it, spoke in a manner that was persuasive but matter-of-fact; as true believers, but not as zealots. Not even, quite, as Those Who Have Seen the Light, but simply as convinced practitioners of a mental discipline.

At ene point each of them put np a hand, palm outward, arm bent at the elbow, as if they were signaling. This, it developed. was how it works: an energizing beam of divine light is passed from one follower to another. The True-Light movement seeks to merge elements of science and religion into a spiritual amalgam that will improve the quality of human life. In the process, its adepts believe, it can cure all earthly fils, all physical disorders.

The Rev. Knntama Okada.

What other faiths does it resemble? Christian Science, per haps? They shake their heads vigorously. Miss Sate says that they do not necessarily abjure medical aid "though we believe that medicine is bad for our physical bodies." They believe in one paramount God, in heaven and hell, in reincarnation. But they see no particular resemblance between their faith and Zen or any other form of yoga, or to Hinduism as such.

A question ebout the True-Light movement's attitude toward materialism, in which was embedded a small needle pointing toward their Americanized homeland, drew no blood, only imperturbable smiles. "We do not deny materialism," said Miss Sato sweetly. "We hope to combine it with things of the spirit."

The movement has an estimated 300,000 followers in Japan, and about 300 so far in the Paris area. There are plans for expansion in Europe, starting with Belgium, West Germany, and England. As for the United States, they mentioned only 1thaca, N.Y., where some Japanese students bave joined the movement.

The basic course consists merely of three days of instructionthere is an "initiation" fee of something under 100 francs-after which the neophyte is welcome to attend further sessions at the Rue Condorcet center without charge. The movement appears to spreading at a speed somewhat less than that of wildfire, but its acolytes are in no hurry. Quiet confidence seems to be the keynote.

Mr. Oboutchi offered their departing guest a shoehorn. Miss Sato smiled. "We hold up our hand," she said, "and the light of God passes."

It is etriking to find an artist today still using the idiom elaborated in the vigorously experimental period that followed the revolution, and even more striking to discover how this idiom has matured, and that the work thus produced is far from dated.

The colors are fresh and luminous, the balance of forms is dynamic and active without being turbulent. They are painted onto vertical planks whose irregularities of profile have sometimes been preserved. This integration of a natural element into the painting is both unex-pected and convincing. After his liberation he went back to his painting, picking up exactly where ha had left off when he was arrested. It was only two years ago—25 years after his liberation—that he was able to return to his experience in the camp, producing a series of paintings entitled "Nous Ne Sommes Pas les Derniers" (We are not the last . . . ) and depicting the emaciated dead. That moment strikes me as a breakthrough in his work and since then he has produced a very fine eequence of paintings of trees—the gnarled and desiccated trees of the South of France—handled in a discreet and sensitive manner reminiscent of Chinese screen painting. His earlier work with its sophisticated aesthetics and its allusion to popular art forms could then be considered a stubborn refusal to acknowledge the power of a monstrous event to which the

Asian Textile Firms Thrive Despite Curb on U.S. Sales

TAIPEI, Dec. 28 (AP-DJ) -In late 1971, Washington forced Asian countries into accepting quotas on their rising volume of textile exports to the United States. The textile makers were pained, and most companies figured that the perfictions Americans had set them on the road to

Now, just over a year later, the companies are still crying. But it does not sound very convincing. ... "We suffered." says Frank Wu, export manager of Far Eastern Textile Ltd. here. "When quotas came, our exports (to the United States) decreased. It

How about total company sales this year? he is asked. Will they be down much? Not exactly. In fact. Far Eastern estimates that lts 1972 sales will be up nearly

Such less-than-painful figures are not confined to Far Eastern. There has been a rise in exports from Hong Kong, South Korea and Talwan—which, along with Japan, were the nations at which the quotas were aimed. Sales are up, and, despite all the protests, the textile industry continues to Liurive.

Textile men long accustomed to the easy and wealthy U.S. markets have been finding other—albeit more difficult—sales outlcts. More importantly, they hore been raising the quality of their goods-and thus charging more. So while yardage exports to the United States may be down, the dollar raine is often

Japan, It is true, has been somewhat harder hit this past year because the quotos coincided with the upward revaluation nf the yen against the dollar. Thus, while the dollor value of Japan's exports to the United States has risen, the value is down in yenwhich, after oll, is what Japanese companies use to pay their bills. But even Japanese executives grudgingly concede that the quotas have not been as onerous s they had expected.

Despite their success in maintaining growth, none of the nations is happy with the quotas. serious. There were isolated cases of bankrupteies, though government officials in all nations concede that these companies were poorly managed and underfinanced and probably. would have collapsed anyway: Especially hurt were Hong Kong firms that had ordered millions of dollars in new equipment that arrived just at the time quotes

In Japan, the government eased the blow and has committed itself to lend the equivalent of $656 million to modernize and help the industry. But mostly the industries of the four nations have been on their own, and they have worked independently to counter the blows.

Hong Kong's worldwide aynpercent higher this year, while Korea's were up 26 percent in the first nine months. Japan's synthetic-fiber exports rose 9 percent to 5574 million in the first nine months. Part of these increases represent higher costs, of course -nylon prices have been risingbut most represent company efquotas.

The first approach was to look for new markets. Korea, for instance, has doubled its exports this year to the Cominon Market while Hong Kong synthetic textiles have been flooding into

Japan's Auto Exports Decline in November

TOKYO, Dec. 28 (AP-DJ) .--Japan's auto exports in November totaled 159,457 units, down 7.7 percent from October and down 5.2 percent from a year earlier, the Auto Manufacturers Association said today.

November vehicle exports were valued at $255.9 million, including $17.5 million of parts, down 9.3 percent from October, but up 42 percent from a year earlier. November exports included 116. 627 cars, down 5.7 percent, 41,806 trucks, down 5 percent, and 1.024 buses, up 109 percent from a year carlier. professions that already bring higher pay, and it is likely to continue for some time. Peter Henle, suthor of the study, says. The study, in the department's current Monthly Labor, Review departs from the widely accepted view that there has been little change in the distribution of income in America since World War II.

Most studies of income distribution examina family incomes, which include such non-earned incomes as welfare and Social Security payments. Family intrend toward more than one wage earner per family.

The study by Mr. Henle, senior specialist on labor for the Library of Congress, examines only the money earnings, wages and salaries of male workers so as to obtain a view of shifts in the distribution of payments for work-

In the period examined, 1958-1972, average carned income was steadily rising throughout the economy as a whole. But in the distribution of that income Mr. Henle found "a-slight persistent trend toward inequality." This trend was found between various occupations and industries and also within several occupations and industries.

For example, using unpublished data from the Bureau of the Hong Kong's worldwide syn. Census, Mr. Henle found that thetic-textile experts in the first from 1958 to 1970 the share of half rore 20 percent. Talwan's aggregate wage and salary inshipments are running about 13 come earned by the lowest fifth of male workers declined to 4.60 percent from 5.10. At the same time, the share of the highest fifth of male wage and salary earners rose to 40.55 percent from 38.15 percent

This trend did not necessarily affect the very highest-paid and lowest-paid workers on the carned income scale, Mr. Henle said. For example, he noted that, while there had been a marked. increase in the number of profes-sionals earnings $40,000 to $50,000 a year, there had been little change in the number of executives carning 5300,000 or more. In a telephone interview, he stressed that the inequality, in income distribution was not caused by any "nefarious scheme against poor people." Rather, the trend reflects a fendency in the economy to produce more. higher-paying jobs without reducing the number of lower-paid workers, he said.

One reason has been a heavy flow of young people into the labor force as a result of the World War IT baby boom, many of them poorly educated young men who took manual jobs at the bottom of the economic ind-der, Mr. Henle said.

There has also been a shift in the structure of jobs. In some industries, including wholesale and retail trade, there has been 2 substantial increase in the use of part-time labor that has helped "tilt the earnings distribution toward inequality." he went on.

More important, there has been a shift toward employment among occupations and industries that pay higher earnings, including those involving hightechnology and public sector jobs, Mr. Henle found. At the same time, the rate of compensation in these higher-paying industries has climbed more sharply than in the lower-paying sectors of the economy, he said

For example, the number of federal civil sevents rose by 35 percent in the 1958-76 period. In this same period, the number of employees in the upper pay eahe-lons of the civil service more

Fed Member Urges Curbs On Big Banks

Multi-Nationals Seen Affecting U.S. System

TORONTO. Dec. 28 AP-DJ Andrew Brimmer, a member of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board. called today for new monetary tions of large multi-national

Because of the intarnational activities of the very large mult:national banks, Mr. Brimmer said, "the financial system in the United States has become much more open to the influence of foreign financial developments than was the case a decade ago." "It would be helpful to provide additional tools with which to moderate the impact of such developments on the domestic economy." Mr. Brimmer told 8 joint meeting of the American Economic Association and the American Finance Association

Alternative Controls

One alternative strategy of monetary control, Mr. Brimmer said, could involve more flexible use of reserve requirements based on bank assets as well as on a hroader range of bank llabilities.
Still another alternative, which he said the Fed board has endorsed, would be to build more flexibility into the U.S. invest-ment tax credit system to moderate the demand for funds by major U.S. corporations at certain times while stimulating it at other times. Mr. Brimmer conceded that many economists feel that a centrai bank should not concern itself with the composition of hank credits, but only with 1:s aggregate level or rate of growth. Still others hold, be said, that the hebavior of the money supply alone should ha the focus of central bank concern. "I clearly do not share such a narrow conception of the task of central banking in the United States," Mr. Brimmer declared. He said that in recent years. particularly during periods of monetary restraint, significant shifts have taken place in ker sectors of the U.S. economy, A. "disproportionate share" of the instability of bank credit flowing to particular sectors can be traced to the activity of multinational banks and other large banks, he added.

Shift in Credit

"As monetary conditions aware from ease to restraint and back to ease in the last several years, commercial banks generally shifted the supply of credit away from households and governments and into the business sector," Mr.

The multi-national banks-generally the large New York commercial banks-were the "fulcrum on which the pattern rested," he continued.

"Relying heavily on Eurodollar inflows, they were able to maintain a high volume of lending to: business in the face of severe attrition in time deposits—especially, in large denomination certificates of deposit. Other banks had to rely more substantially on liquidation of government securites and borrowing frum domestic sources to obtain funds." he said.

Mr. Brimmer noted that the Fed board had imposed marginal reserve -requirements on Eurodollar borrowings by U.S. commercial banks in 1969. That action was intended to moderate the access or multi-national banks to additional funds that, in turn, were channeled to the favored business borrowers of such banks.

But he said that the 1969 action and other measures "still left essentially untouched the key elcment underlying the marked instability in the availability of eredit in leading economic

What approach the Fed takes to correct this situation "is unimportant to me," Mr. Brimmesaid "What is important is a decision by the Congress to put in place some kind of instrument to assure that some sectors of the economy do not carry a disproportionate burden from monetary policy while others are af-

North had good resson for his jump-shift of three clubs in response to one diamond, although few tournament players would do more than two clubs. After a two-clnb response it is not easy to indicate slam possibilities. After three clubs North has done his bit and can leave his partner to make the running.

South might have given up at three no-trump, but made a mild slam try by bidding four clubs. North gave preference to diamonds, and carried on to six when his partner bid five diamonds. The result was a slightly optimistic contract.

On the face of it, South needed two good things out of three: the trump break, the heart finesse and the club finesse. But there were complications. The club suit offered some chance of development, so avoiding the need for the heart finesse. And a heart lead could, and did, force an immediate decision.

It did not seem likely that West would lead the heart eight away from the king, so South put up the ace in dummy. He planned to rely on a winning club finesse, combined with a favorable break in one of the minor suits.

At the second trick, the club queen was led for a successful finesse. The ace and king of diamonds were cashed, and South found that West held a sura trump trick. Now the club ace was taken, and dummy was entered with a spade lead to play the club jack. This removed East's king, and when West could not overruff, the slam was home. Dummy was entered with another spade lead, and the heart loser from the closed hand was discarded on a club winner,

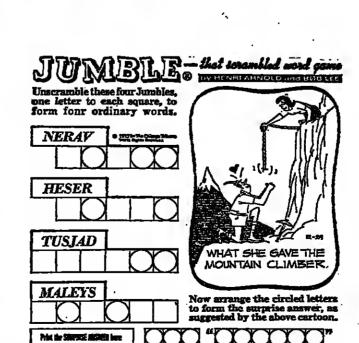

South would have felt foolish if West had held exactly two trumps and both the crucial kings; but that was an unlikely in. Whenever you raise the ourstion of John O'Hara's talent, there are always older men who get a faraway look in their eyes get a faraway look in their cycs and say: "Son, he really knew what it was all about. Nobody could tell it the way O'Hara could," etc. I wonder about theso men. Do they defend them be-cause these stories glamorize in some curious way their own uneventful youths? Or is it possible that in those days people were simply less aware of their be-havior, less self-conscious — so that now they can't tell a true picture of their generations from a felse one.

"It may sound like a cliche now, but it was real then—this is another of the familiar defenses. Again, I don't believe it. Many of the qualities or quires that are now regarded as typical of the American character at one time or another never were true, in my opinion. It's not that the perceptions of people like Mr. O'Hara became cliches through imitation by lesser writers. I'm convinced that these cliches originated with him: he created them. These particular bootleg-gers, gamblers, losers, lovers or loners existed only in his head. What Mr. O'Hara did was to oversimplify and sentimentalize certain superficial aspects of American life and palm them off on his public as "reality." His people are not characters, but types, constructs of an amateur sociology that is about as accurate as fortune-telling or phrenology. The professional sociol-ogist observes the data and makes the relevant generalization. Mr. O'Hara makes the generalization first, then dishes up the data to support it, in tho form of labels and trademarks, the outer signs and symbols of the period

His assumed predictability of people; their gestures as limited as a trained bear; the ever-present bottle, like a child's pacifier; the the view of love as an arbitrary and inexplicable obsession; the equating of ambition with a ringside table at a club; the petty blckering that is supposed to suggest the complexities of the human heart; the almost total absence of any metaphysical dimension or perspective—all this, I'm convinced, has helped to create that caricature of Americans thet has half the civilized world condescending to us,

Let me give you a few examples from "The Time Element." A nightelub owner and his headwalter are puzzled as to the identity of a respectable-looking middle-aged man, who takes a table alone every night, drinks a sizable number of Scotches, and leaves after the floor show. He seems familiar, but they can't place him. The young singer in the club protests that this man "gives her the creeps." "He looks at me like he owns me," she says. "Either he goes. or I do." The mystery man is barred from the club, and a few days later they read about his suicide in the paper: He was the singer's estranged father. The irony bere is so heavy that we feel as if the author had dropped it on our toe. A playwright who gave an Times book reviewer.

THERE are 34 stories here, and octor his big break—in a role as a "petty and despicable spager"—show a friend his astuteness in typecasting by pretending to be broke and asking the now-suctions are always older men who cessful notor for a loan. True in type," the actor responds with brusnoff.

A poor boy who is rejected by a well-to-do girl's family eventually becomes a prosperous press agent and producer. In a bar, he nicets a stranger who turns out to be none other than the husband of his old love. The husband asks the press agent-producer to fix him up with one of tile girls from his show, and that worthy replies by going to the phone to proposition the philanderer's wife. Her morals, however, are still intact, and the producer is on the point of traiting on her husbond when something holds him back.
"Bartender, two ryes," he says, and I say that's a terrible story. In fiellor, some characters are larger than life, and some are smaller—but Mr. O'Hara's people are phonier than life, more monotonous than life, more artificial. They don't have emo-tions: they have some sort of Pavlovian reflexes invented by the author. A penniless man married to a rich wife must be hollow and bitter; the only recourse for the unlucky in love is cheap cynicism, suicide or the bottle. And so on, ad nauseam.

To my mind, this sort of stuff is compounded of equal parts of Walter Winchell columns, barroom braggadocio, maudlin valentines and poison-pen letters. Mr. O'Harn's stories remind me of the drinks they used to serve in speakeasys: the label was respectable, but the stuff was homemode rotgut. There are, and always have been, quite a few things wrong with this country of ours, and some of these flaws have their peculiar pathos—but you won't find them in "The Time Element."

I can't understand Mr. O'Hara's appeal. Are people so flabbergasted by life, so assatled by a sense that it is meaningless, that they are willing to accept these tawdry interpretations? According to the foreword, this particular group of stories was written in the late forties. Twenty of them were published—15, astenishingly enough, in The New Yorker. Fourteen were never published, and none of the 24 were ever collected in book form, ostensibly because the author had so many stories that he overlooked these. We know that he had great facility, but as an English wit once remarked: "Easy writing's curst hard read-ing."

Right now, we are suffering a convulsion of nostalgia: picture books of totally unremarkable film stars of the past; albums of stunningly unspontaneous big-band hits of the forties and fifties. And here we have Mr. O'Hara's contribution. I can only surmise that these must be sperate times DUL lusionment with the present and the future must indeed be morbid to make us wish to bring out these skeletons in our closet.

Defeat Flames; Canadiens Bow

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 (UPI).-When the infant World Hockey Association raided the Boston Bruins for four of their key performers this summer, the experts said there was no woy the Bruins could repeat as National Hockey League champions.

They also said there was almost no way last ceason's runner-ups, the New York Rangers, could miss out on being this year's best team.

Well, things haven't quite worked out that way and after Boston posted its fifth straight triumph, 3-1, last night over the Atlanta Flames, and the Rangers lost to the Buffalo Sabres, the Bruins moved four points shead of New York in the East and were only one point behind the first-place Montreal Canadiens.

Boston won last night on second-period goals by Wayne Cash-msn, Fred Stanfield and John Bucyk. It was the Bruins' third victory in as many games against the Flames

Czechs Win in Hockey From Canadian Juniors

COLORADO SPRINGS, Dec. 28 (AP1.-Czechoslovakia, capitalizing on Canada's too-rough tactics, scored two second-period powerplay goals and posted a 5-1 World ice hockey tournament victory last night. The Czechs, who nipped the United States 3-2 in Tuesday's opening round of the second annual four-team tournament, hammered home two goals in less than a minute-and-a-half span for a 4-1 lead.

Canada, represented by one of its top junior A teams, was playing two men short when Petr Adamik, who scored the winning goal against the United States, rifled a shot past goalie John Davidson for a 3-1 Czech lead at 3 minutes 47 seconds of the middle session. NEW YORK, Dec. 28 (NYT) .-The Washingian Redskins have a very fine runner, Larry Brown, and the Dallas Cowboys have a cannon, too, in Calvin Hill. How well each does against the other's strong defense will be an im-portant factor in the National Conference chempionship game at Washington on Sunday, a contest in which the oddsmakers have made the Redskins a fourpoint betting choice.

By William N. Wallace

Hill is having his best season of his four in the professional ranks. Most significantly for the Yale alumnus, he got through the 14 regular season games with-

"I thought I had to prove something," he said, and he was cor-rect. Although a magnificent athlete at 6 feet 3 and 225 pounds, Hill had fellen victim to a series of leg, ankle and foot injuries which, in the opinion of his critics, were the result of his careless habits on the field, such as hurdling tacklers.

Hill became the first 1,000-yard runner in the 12-year history of the Cowboys, which was a fair feat. He gained 1,036 yards and was his team's leading pass re-ceiver with 43 catches for 364 yards. This was on a squad that numbers as pass receivers Bob Hayes, Lance Alworth, Billy Parks, Ron Sellers and Mike

Chuck Howley, the injured linehacker who covered Hill in prac-tice, had a comment. "When Calvin comes at you he kind of lenes," said Howley, making up a word, "Then he's on you and he'a tone. He has deceptive speed and great acceleration."

The one pass Hill did not catch this past season could have saved the Cowhoys s lot of later agony. Against the Redskins in Washington last October, Hill got deep behind the secondary on the opening offensive series and let a perfect pass from Craig Morton go right through his hands. It would have been a sure touchdown play,

The Redskins came from behind to win that game, 24-20, and Hill did not have much of

But his best game of the season came against the 49ers in the playoff at San Francisco last Saturday. He gained 125 yards rushing of the 165 made by Dallas and thus helped to sustain an ettack otherwise bobbled by continued dropped passes. Hill is gaining recognition. He

According to Harvard Man, Steelers, Not Dolphins, Best

By Richard D. Lyons

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (NYT) .- A Harvard professor of statistics, who is also an armchair quarterback, outlined yesterday a new method of ranking professional lootball teams that found the Miami Dolphins not to be the best club.

Dr. Frederick Mosteller said the Dolphins had by far the easiest schedule this season and that the class team really was the Pittsburgh

Mosteller, who says he is a fan of the New England Pairiots, "the worst team in pro football" by his analysis, attempts to arrive at a rational basis of comparison of teams despite won-lost records and the results of playoffs.

The main difference between Mosteller's system and most others that be discards a team's best three games and worst three games. Mosteller, chairman of the department of statistics at Harvard, presented his paper. "A robust analysis of professional football scores," to the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at the Sheraton-Park Hotel.

Basically, Mosteller's method compares each team's performance with what an "average" team could be expected to do against the same schedule. Included in the analysis are 13 pages of intricate calculations featuring such statistical abracadabra as "stem and leaf plots" and "trimeans." From thousands of calculations emerged the following portrait of the relative performance of the National Football League teams, with the number on the right showing how many points better or worse a given team played against an "average" chib: Pittsburgh, 140 better; Miami, 109; Green Bay, 99; Oakland, 91; Dallas, 75; Washington, 64; Minnesota, 63; Detroit, 61; San Francisco, 56: Cleveland, 46: Cincinnati, 38; Kansas City, 36; New York Giants, 16; New York Jets, 1,'2, Chicago, even. Los Angeles, 4 worse: Atlanta, 15; San Diego, 36; Denver, 42; Baltimore, 43; Buffalo, 71; St. Louis, 118; New Orleans, 119; Houston, 143; Philadelphia, 196; New England, 210.

Briefly, Mosteller arrived at the index number on the right by: leaving out a team's three best and three worst games, giving added weight to the offensive and defensive scores of the remaining eight games on the team's schedule, and subtracting the defensive from the offensive scores to gain the index number.

but Klick scored the winning touchdown in the final quarter on an eight-yard burst. Kiick had been used heavily in the third quarter when the Dolphins ran more to the inside. "We started to run effectively in the third quarter," Shula said.

When we got that accomplished, we were able to get outside, too." Between them, Morris and Kiick ran for 122 yards. Morris gained 72 on 15 carries, Kiick 50 on 14.

But the Steelers are equally concerned with stopping Paul Warfield, the wide receiver who caught three touchdown passes against them as the Dolphins railed for a 24-21 victory in their last meeting, a 1971 regular-season game at Miami.

Mel Blount was the Steeler cornerback burned by Warfield after the Steelers had taken a 21-3 lead.

"I think it was just a case of him being a second-year player at the time, perhaps a little shy on experience," Warfield said, "He made a couple of mistakes that probably hurt his ball club. He's done a great job this year. He's more experienced and probably more confident."

Warfield caught passes that resulted in touchdown plays of 12, 86 and 60 yards in that game. "That was a big game for us," Shula said. "It was the turning point of our season a year ago, being down by 18 points and coming back to win. But looking to Sunday's game, I'd say that the Steelere' defense is their greatest improvement."

The Dolphins, along with the Dallas Cowboys, were notified by Pete Rozelle, the NFL commissioner, to arrive in Pittsburgh and Washington, respectively, on Friday, not Saturday.

Rozelle cited problems that the Oakland Raiders had in arriving at Pittsburgh last week for the AFC playoff there last Saturday. Because of rain and for, the Raiders didn't arrive at their Pittsburgh hotel until around 3 a.m. on Friday.

Craig Morton was the quarterback as the Cowboys posted a 10-4 won-lost record during tho regular season as Slauboch, a star in last season's Super Eowl victory, recuperated from a shoulder injury. But in the play-off at San Francisco, Staubach rallied the Cowhoya to a 30-28 victory with two touchdown posses in the last 90 seconds.

"It's a little distracting to tha quarterbacks, not knowing who the starter is going to be," Lan-dry acknowledged. "But you've got to decide whether you want go with the one who got you to the playoffs or the one who won a playoff game for you." It's also distracting in tha

Metropolitan's Horse Not a Modern Forgery

ST. LOUIS. Mo. Dec. 28 tUPI).—Scientists at Washington University say that they have provided "definitive evidence" that the famous bronze horse owned by the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York is not a modern forgery but is between 2,000 and 4,000 years old. In 1967, Joseph V. Noble, then vice-director of the museum, said that the 15-inch-tall horse was not the superh example of classical Greek bronze sculpture it was thought to be, but a forgery perhaps only 50 years old.

Mr. Nohle based his contentloo oo the presence of an iron armature within the core of the horse, apparent mold markings on the body and the placeent of deliberate holes in and about the head and

After his declaration, the museum withdrew the horse from public exhibition and sent it for tests the space physics laboratory at Washington University. Scientists using thermoluminescent dating techniques found the horse to be 2,000 to 4.000 years old.

(The horse will go back on display soon as the centerpiece of an exhibition entitled "The Study of a Work of Art: Points of View," according to (Scientists and conservators are generally agreed that the horse is ancient because of technical evidence but cannot give it a precise date.

(Mr. Noble, now director of the Museum of the City of New York, told The Times last week that although the horse cannot be a Greek work of the 5th century BC. it "possibly may be a late Hellenistic x Roman period eclectic piece. But its appearance leads one to believe that it is a 20thcentury forgery. Even if it is Hellenistic, it is still a copy and, as such, a forgery. All forgeries are like vampires. They should have a knife driven through their hearts.")

U.S. Notes Increasing Gap Between Women's, Men's Pay

By Richard D. Lyons WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (NYT). -Salaries of women workers are not only lower than those of men. but the gap between them is widening as well, the head of ths Labor Department's Women's Bureau said yesterday.

Outlining a "grim picture" of the latest federal statistics dealing with the incomes of minority groups, Mrs. Elizabeth Duncan Koontz said that a woman working full time in 1970 made only 57 percent of a man's income, down from 64 percent in 1955.

"Women with one to three years of college education had lower incomes in 1971 than men who had completed only eight years of school," she said in citing another example. In the years since those cited this "pay gap" has been narrowed in 1972.

Mrs. Koootz made her remarks at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science here. The association also heard a panel of professional women complain of being discriminated against by men.

Their theme was that men are afraid to share social and familial power and responsibilities with women, and hy oot doing so only work themselves into their graves by carrying either most or all of the financial hurdens.
